DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This two bay wide, three story high house is located at the end of a row of four similar structures on a corner site. It is built of brick laid in common bond and has a gabled roof. It is currently city owned and vacant, and all first floor openings have been sealed with concrete; upper floor openings are boarded.

The Henrietta Street facade of the building has been altered. Originally identical to the facade at 109 Henrietta, openings were symmetrically placed on the facade with wooden sills and lintels. Smaller attic windows were fitted at the third floor level.

Presently the entrance is at ground level on the right side. Vertical window placement and height has been altered, and sills and lintels are of brick. A plain brick cornice runs at the roofline.

The side of the building is fenestrated with a single segmental arched window opening set off center at the first floor level. A pair of chimney stacks rises from the side wall, on either side of the gable peak, indicating that the entrance to the front was originally on the left side.

A single bay wide, two bay deep three story high back building extends from the right side of the rear facade. Its shed roof is continuous with the rear side of the gable of the main building. A  $1\frac{1}{2}$  bay wide, two bay deep, two story high back building extends from the rear of the first. Its shed roof is set with the peak perpendicular to the peak of the main roof, and forms a full gable with the roof of the abutting backbuilding of the neighboring house. A brick cornice runs at the roofline, and a pointed-arched covered chimney rises from the rear corner of the party wall.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

113 W. Henrietta Street is an excellent example of the typical middle class residence being built in Sharp-Leadenhall at the middle of the nineteenth century.
